Hi Scott,

I reached out to a couple landowners that are adjacent to the parcel where the crash took place. One of them had not contracted with this company, and I couldn't get hold of the other one. So I cannot SPECIFICALLY confirm that this pilot had sprayed adjacent to this site in the recent past and knew about the tower. However, one other landowner who lived adjacent did say that he had seen this plane many times in the past fly right over this area. Additionally, we were told that on the day of the incident, the pilot had gone back to his base to refill his tanks several times that day and was flying essentially the same route back to the field he was spraying. So it was related to us that he had flown the same round-trip route several times that day previous to the time of the incident.

Hope this helps – let me know if you need me to clarify anything.

Thanks, Kent
