RE: Laptop hard drive recovered from airplane wreckage.

Rafeel Syed
[REDACTED]

Staten island, NY 10301

Dear Rafeel,

Enclosed is the hard drive presumed to have come from the laptop that you mentioned that your brother in law owned. This hard drive was found separated from the laptop in its present condition. It was found in the aircraft wreckage. I apologize for the delay in returning this to you as I had to determine if it was required to be sent to our laboratory in Washington D.C. for attempted recovery of any flight data that may have been contained. I determined that the avionics on-board the airplane did not contain hard drives and therefore the enclosed hard drive was not a part of the airplane's systems. As such I am returning this to you as personal property of the pilot.

Thank You,

[REDACTED]
