Then the engine failed completely. I went through the cheklist to restart it, made sure mixture was rich, fuel pump on and brought the throttle back and tried to start it. It turned over but never fired. I tried to start it two or three times with no luck. So I started looking for a place to land and was flying southbound and saw trees and houses and turned east, gliding down slowly I started running out of time and tried to make the base to final turn northbound to land in a field. I didnt complete the turn, and was headed straight for a house. I blacked out right before impact so I dont remember that at all. Next thing I remmeber I was right in front of a house and I could hear and see what looked like smoke leaking. I realized I was on top of a propane tank. I cut the fuel to the engine and shut the rest of the plane down completely and got out of there as quick as I could. Completely unhurt. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
