According to local authorities and family acquaintances, the pilot had been flying in the local area for several weeks with aspirations to become an agricultural pilot. Law enforcement personnel stated that during those weeks, the airplane had been observed by several local persons to be flying at low altitude and performing "ag-type maneuvers" over the fields. The airplane wreckage was located by a farmer about 1150 on the day of the accident, and they called "911" to report the accident.
