A video recording of the pilot speaking was posted on Facebook and provided to the responding FAA Inspector. A general synopsis of the video:

The pilot reported that he was at Mountain Home and had just gotten the airplane "out of the shop." He was flying back to his hangar in Cherokee Village. He said that everything "was fine" and as he was coming in to land, everything was "totally normal". When the airplane got over the runway numbers, the pilot reported that "all of a sudden, it got super gusty". He reported that the airplane "got unstable". The pilot said that he performed the procedures for a go-around and when he "gave it gas" to go-around the engine quit. The airplane was "coming down" so he selected an area "to bring it down" and flew the airplane down to the ground and impacted terrain. He egressed the airplane.
