Mr. Dummer reported that while on final approach for runway 02 at Discovery Bay Airport at Norwalk Landing (MO06), Shell Knob, Missouri, he experienced a downdraft, and the airplane started to sink. He attempted to recover by adding power and raising the nose of the airplane. As the airplane crossed the runway threshold, the airplane ballooned and was in a nose-high attitude. He momentarily heard the stall horn and pushed forward on the yoke to lower the nose of the airplane, but he did not have enough altitude to recover. The airplane stalled and impacted the grass on the side of the runway.
