About 4:50 on 2/24/22, I was standing in my neighbors driveway talking to him. As a licensed private pilot I always look up as small planes flow over. I happened to hear a single engine plane overhead and thought the planes loud engine sound did not match it's slow airspeed, which meant to me he was most likely in a steep climb to practice a stall. I began walking my dog and by the time I looked up again I see the plane diving, almost straight down, and slowing twisting toward the ground. I'm thinking how unusual due to his close proximity to the ground, hoping he would recover, only to watch it go below the tree line followed by a black ball of smoke.

Feel free to call me if I can be of any assistance.

Respectfully,
William K. Edelmayer
