Contact: Kevin Anderson/ Friend of pilot

According to a friend of the pilot, he spoke to the pilot/owner on the morning of the accident. He said the pilot purchased the airplane about five years ago and had been working on it since then. This was the first flight since he purchased the airplane, and he planned on staying in the traffic pattern to conduct a few touch-and-go landings. He went on to say that another passenger/pilot had flown in to fly with the pilot/owner. When the friend arrived at the airport, he noticed the airplane was not in the traffic pattern. After a few hours, he became concerned and assumed that the airplane landed at another airport. Later that evening, the pilot/owner's wife called the friend to say she had not heard from her spouse. They contacted the local authorities and reported the airplane missing.
