In Person Conversation with property owner south of the airport

3 o'clock right when this happened. This plane is coming towards me. "Engine Screamin!" It was coming from the north to the south. He owns a house at the end of the runway and was sitting on the porch. "Then, he abruptly changes direction, throttles down, then throttles back up, I mean that engine was screaming." Abruptly changes direction again and now it's doing north.

The plane was really loud. He could just see him through the trees. Don't think it was an engine issue, the engine was running good. The trees at the southern part of the airport runway are about 50 to 60 feet.
