Incident Report for the FAA

Emergency landing in north Dallas on 5/07/18 at approx. 11:00pm.

I departed KWEA (Weatherford, TX) early in the morning for a VFR flight direct to KTUP (Tupelo, MS). I did not file a flight plan, but utilized VFR flight following for the trip. Cruising altitude en route was 5500. It was a beautiful day to fly and uneventful. Total tach time for the morning flight direct from KWEA to KTUP was 3.9. The plane has two 25 gallon tanks (50 gal total) and burns approx. 10 gal per hour; therefore, it has a range of 4.5 hrs, plus a half hour reserve. Upon landing, I taxied to the self-service pump on the north end of the field to top-off, then taxied back to the ramp at Tupelo Aviation. The self-service pump shot-off at $150 (36 gals); the right tank was not 100% full. Looking back in hind-sight I should have run my card again and topped off that tank.

At approx. 7:30 pm I departed KTUP for the return flight to KWEA. I, again, utilized VFR flight following, so I was in touch with ATC throughout the flight. I had intended to stay at 6500 ft, but there was a bank of clouds, so I climbed to 8500 and later, briefly climbed to 10,500. Once I got beyond the clouds, I descended back to 8500, then just east of the Bravo airspace I descended back down to 6500. Approx 20-30 minutes east of Dallas my engine sputtered and I knew my right tank was dry. I switched to the left tank and kept flying. In hind-sight I should have looked for the nearest field and landed ASAP. I did a mental calculation of how much I thought was in the left tank, I was less than 30 minutes from KWEA and thought I would make it. My engine started sputtering and I knew I was in trouble. I contacted ATC and declared an emergency; I thought I could make it to Addison and then when the engine quit altogether I started going down quickly. I started looking for an open area to try to put it down.

Total tach time on the plane from departure at KTUP to point of impact was 3.7.

I regret the trouble that this has caused for everyone involved – Dallas PD, Dallas Fire & Rescue, ATC, FAA and NTSB. Mostly, I am thankful that there was no injury to anyone on the ground and that I walked away from this.
