I interviewed the pilot who was seated in the forward left seat, who was a brother to the passenger. He gave a description of the severity of his injuries and his recovery. When I asked about the flight, he stated that he didn't remember the flight and that he had a loss of memory due to the post-traumatic event of the accident. He doesn't remember the day before the accident and up to 2 weeks after the accident. The camera mount that was mounted in the airplane's cabin was installed by the previous owner, and that there was no camera installed and running during the accident flight. He bought the airplane in October of 2018 and started flying it in November of 2019. He concluded by stating that he probably refueled the airplane to capacity prior to the flight but doesn't remember doing so.
