On Feb. 1st Eddie arrived at the airport about 10:30 am. He parked his car next to the pilots lounge building, He came into the lounge with his thermos of coffee. He sat down and asked me what I was up to. I told him that I didn't have any service calls till about 2 pm today and I would be here at the airport working on things. Eddie was in a good mood as usual, He said that he felt better about his airplane since it flew much better with weight up front. He mentioned that he had spoken to two men that own S-12 airplanes and that they flew with added ballast up front. He also mentioned that after that flight he changed all the spark plugs and ran the motor , he discovered that two of the spark plugs were bent at the tip, so that there was no gap. Eddie mentioned that he looked at everything on the airplane to make sure he had no fuel or oil leaks or loose connections. Eddie was looking forward to this next flight and was waiting for the day to get a little warmer. We visited for at least 1 ½ hours in the pilots lounge, he decided to go to his hangar and he drove there. I went to my hangar. I went over to Eddies hangar about 12:45 and he said that he was wishing that it was a little warmer because he was cold. The winds were not very strong. Eddie and I stood outside his hangar on the sunny side away from the wind. About 10 minutes passed and he said that he was going to wait until tomorrow cause the weather was going to be better. So I said ok and I told him I was going to go eat lunch. He told me I will see you tomorrow.
