Narrative:

On an email from Josh Cawthra, NTSB Senior Aviation Accident Investigator, the following is a summary of what he stated:

- This information was provided from a conversation with the pilot involved in the accident at Catalina Airport (AVX) :
- During the approach to runway 22, the pilot reported that the airplane was "a little high" and "a little fast" and touchdown was about 1/4 down the runway.
- As the airplane approached the end of the runway, the pilot reported that he applied more brakes, but the airplane overran the runway, nosed over and impacted terrain.
- The pilot reported that there were no preaccident mechanical failures or malfunctions with the airplane that would have precluded normal operation.
