Andrew,

While at the hangar, I examined the aircraft as it sat upon arrival (~0920). After looking the aircraft over, the engine cowlings were taken off and I started looking for obvious defects/signs of damage. I also was able to move the propeller a complete rotation, which also appears to be a complete rotation of the engine flywheel (the prop had previously been moved ~12 inches during recovery of the wreckage, according to the individual who performed the recovery). Individual who performed the recovery also extracted ~1.5 gallons of fuel out of the left tank. No download of the engine monitoring system data was performed.

Not even close. I signed his sign-in sheet. I was in at ~0920 and out at ~1040. Ask him to submit the sign-in sheet and send me a copy of it. I didn't think I needed to take a picture of it but apparently I should have.

Hey David,

Jeff is showing that you were there at AvTech for 7 hours. Does this look correct? Let me know. Thanks.
